Just to confirm again from another angle, here is what we received from Global Affairs officials:

The team contacted CargoJet and BEIJING, and confirmed the flight crew has all the required papers, incl. flight permit for the upcoming flight.

Confirmed – there is no visa problem with our cargo jet flight scheduled to depart midday tomorrow.

I don't know what the Globe has, but we did change our landing permits at some point in the past few days because we did delay this flight by 24hours (it was originally going to leave today) in order to be able to get a shipment coming in today on that flight.

Hi all,

Just had a call with Andre Filion. He's calling cargojet to double-check and will get back to me asap. We don't believe there to be a problem here either.

Adding Pascale + Laurence. I have not heard anything like this but Globe has been poking around.

Hi there – Brian got a call from a journo from the Globe who says there is a cargo jet stuck in Vancouver right now that allegedly can't leave to pick up medical supplies in China because they can't get visas.

Have you heard about this issue and do you have any direction on what we can tell the Globe?

Thanks!
