How's all of this, then?

TWEET

We received new shipments of personal protective equipment over the weekend - over a million N95 masks and millions of pairs of gloves - and Canadian-made gowns will be delivered starting Monday. We'll keep working so those on the front line have what they need to stay safe.

FB POST

Nurses, doctors, lab techs, and all health care professionals are hard at work to keep us safe right now, and we're doing our part to make sure they have what they need to stay safe as well.

Over the weekend, we received new shipments of personal protective equipment. We now have 1.1 million N95 masks ready to be shipped to the provinces and territories - with more to come. We've also received millions of pairs of gloves, and we'll be getting new protective gowns delivered from domestic suppliers starting Monday.

We've also made progress on testing. We're moving forward with a test kit from Ottawa-based Spartan Bioscience and we'll keep looking at other rapid testing options. As demand for these supplies and test kits goes up, we're going to make sure Canada can keep up.

Ah got it. Edit the tweet to this:

That is accurate.

Sorry, I should've clarified - the first one is a tweet, while the rest is a longer post that would go on Facebook.

We can't fit all of it into the tweet but is there specific language that should be added to the tweet? We can try and edit it in.

I don't like this one, the shipments going out to provinces are partially from those deliveries:

This one further down is good and more accurate, let's use this one:

We've also received millions of pairs of gloves, and we'll be getting new protective gowns delivered from domestic suppliers starting Monday.
