Caught one thing with this tweet so making another edit. Since the gowns are being delivered next Monday, they can't really be included in a list of things coming this weekend - so I've reworded it a little to separate them.

We received new shipments of personal protective equipment over the weekend, including 1.1 million N95 masks and millions of pairs of gloves - and gowns will be delivered starting Monday. We'll keep working to make sure those on the front line have what they need to stay safe.

Nurses, doctors, lab techs, and all health care professionals are hard at work to keep us safe right now, and we're doing our part to make sure they have what they need to stay safe as well.

Over the weekend, we received new shipments of personal protective equipment. We now have 1.1 million N95 masks ready to be shipped to the provinces and territories - with more to come. We've also received millions of pairs of gloves, and we'll be getting new protective gowns delivered from domestic suppliers starting Monday.

We've also made progress on testing, and we're moving forward on a range of rapid testing kits - both from here in Canada and around the world. As demand for these supplies goes up, we're going to make sure Canada can keep up.
