The burn rate Ontario told me three weeks ago was:

250k N95s per week
2.5 million surgicals

Maybe they're sending more stuff to long term care but 4x is a lot on surgicals.

Thanks. Will share with my officials and ask them to reach out to their contact at Ontario Health.

But yes - these requests really need to go direct to officials for accounting and (don't say this out loud) a bit of a challenge function. That burn rate is very interesting.

Update- Ontario has provided a list of their needs. I'm dealing with this entire issue of premier ford giving my boss their needs before health gets a heads up or without his office even knowing. In the meantime, sharing with the hopes it can be shared with officials:

- 1) 500 k units of swabs and reagent -- As they are stepping up testing.
- 2) Nitrile gloves -- "As many as you have!" 10 m would be good.

3) Gowns -- Enough to keep us going. 250 k would be good.

4) N-95 masks and surgical masks. A lot! Currently, the weekly burn rate in Ontario is 500k N-95 masks a week, and 10 m surgical masks a week. (Please note -- roughly twice as high as the previous weekly burn rate.)

Hey guys,

I know that Jeremy flagged Premier Ford mentioned concerns about lack of PPE. It turns out he meant it more generally. They're concerned that they have big bulk buys that aren't being fulfilled fast enough or fully because of Federal buy issues. They're getting that data from the PCO provided procurement info that we get in our daily call that's also sent to PTs.

Hope that helps clarify

Hey Shannon,

This is the foundation of what we use to brief the Premier plus they most up to date information that our health officials get through yours. Happy to chat again tonight if that would be helpful.
