Matt had mentioned this on a call the other day but maybe we can make step 2 (connecting buyers with potential suppliers) easier by having a centralized webpage that just says –

“Here is a list of suppliers who have contacted us through Buy & Sell – this is where they are located in Canada and these are the supplies they say they can make. We encourage you to reach out.”

First step is to find out from health, if and when guidelines are coming for grocery store workers and pharmacists.

Like why would a pharmacist need an N95 mask? I don't know.

Second, I think the goal should be to connect them with potential suppliers rather than have us procure this stuff for them. Connect them directly with suppliers that could assist?

Hi all.

Attached is the two modelling from both/either Loblaw and Sobeys data then grossed-up for the grocery market overall. This does not include pharmacies altogether, just Loblaws. I understand more pharmacy details has been given to DMs.

They've made assumptions on how often masks and gloves should be changed so I think a PHAC assessment on if it's necessary would be useful to determining how accurate their numbers are.

Happy to chat more.
